

I am sometimes asked how I, from being an Anglican priest, can now become a Quaker.

Essentially it is that in this phase of my life I now feel called to be a member of the Religious Society of Friends, and just like I was once called to be a priest in the Church of England. This second calling feels for me no kind of rejection, but a fulfilment of the first.

At the same time, the Quaker valuing of integrity prompts me to keep faith with all that is expected of me as a priest in the catholic tradition whilst in this role at St Nicolas. I remain fully committed to our development and growth, valuing the particular ways we hope to live out our Christian faith at St Nicolas’.

These are my two guiding principles.
